Yes, one Southern blood is better than a hundred of any other. Here's an outrage by our Teddy, a great and cruel wrong. While the colored man and woman sit in bond and misery, here's this Alabama dorky At the President's place.
Yes, residing at the White House—Will you just take a hard on that—With his legs' length the melody Where once Jeff Davis sat And the President is asking As politely as can be About the pecky Nigger school house here at Tanquer.
Why did the White House With a couple "twain" with, With a half a dozen waltzes To bring the dinner in? Why not take him in an alley For a handout fifteen cents, Why give to any dorky such a show of consequence?
And while our blood is boiling—My Maids, Volunteered! The indications seem to be—That's a case for it is equal: And if the spoke his sentiment About the dorky only, "That's right boy, let 'em go!"

Last evening President David Conner and Secretary-Treasurer Harvey W. Chambers of Local Branch No. 31, Leather Workers' United Brotherhood, called on Mr. Philip Clark and presented him with a check for $40, on account of the recent death of his son, Mr. Frank Clark. The latter was a member of the Brotherhood, whose headquarters is at Kansas City; but the father had no knowledge of his standing in the organization, nor had he made any claim on account of his membership. This speaks volumes for this Brotherhood, which not only looks after its members while they live, but seeks to smooth the pathway of the dependent ones they leave behind.

The new steel hull towboat built by James Rees & Sons for Jones & Laughlin, limited, will be one of the finest ever put into use on the Ohio river. The body of William Lee, a deck watchman on the steamer Courier, was recovered from the river Tuesday above Ft. Pleasant. It is supposed that he fell off the boat while asleep. He is a son of Jack Lee of the steamer Indiana.

The Memphis Scimitar says: "The R. E. Lee was built at New Albany, Ind., by Mr. Humphreys for John W. Cannon during the summer of 1865; left Louisville on her first trip November 6 for New Orleans. She was a New Orleans and Vicksburg packet and cost $250,000. She was taken to Louisville June, 1876, to be dismantled, and her engines only were put in the second R. E. Lee, built at Jeffersonville by the Howards for John W.

Cannon. The second boat was burned about fifteen miles below Vicksburg, and Captain Cannon died about 1885 at Frankfort, Ky.

Many old mariners at Pittsburgh predict that there will not be a coalboat rise in the Ohio until after a fall of snow. It rarely happens that the opening of navigation is delayed until December. The first week in November usually produces snow, and if there is no rise in the meantime the mariners will content themselves to wait until the snow flies before witnessing the reumption in navigation. Many more are idle in the Monongahela valley that would be running coal if there were sufficient water to bring empty craft to Pittsburgh from the South.
